Soft courtyard

Curves where you walk, straight walls where you live: the house flows round the stair like a courtyard.

- One curved wall does the guest's thinking: walk up the hall and it sweeps you round the stair into the TV living, while a 45° arch on your left opens the round dining room.
- Dining moves to the terrace: a round walnut table for 6 (8 with leaves) under a round travertine ceiling cove, in a room with soft corners.
- The old dining zone becomes the family's everyday table: a faceted walnut booth for 6 inside the open kitchen, with a 4.3 m² walk-in pantry and glass panels that close the whole kitchen off.
- Upstairs you arrive in a round hall: every door opens off it. The suite through a walnut pivot door, the kids' wing, the prayer room, and a kitchenette niche cut into the curve.
- Hotel suite: walk-through his dressing to the bedroom, hers (4.6 m of wardrobe) and a shower room with a curved walk-in shower. The suite lounge becomes Bedroom 3 with its own shower and lockable door.
- Space out of nothing: a secret loft den over the kids' bath (ladder behind the playroom bookcase), suitcase loft over the hers dressing, linen niche in the curve's corner.

Big moves vs the master plan

- Dining to the terrace; old dining zone = breakfast booth inside the kitchen.
- Curved wall + 45° arch at the top of the hall replace the straight salon opening.
- Kitchen closable on all sides with sliding glass; pantry door on a 45° corner.
- Upstairs corridor replaced by a round hall; kitchenette + laundry on the west wet spine.
- Kids wing behind one door; lofts over the kids bath and hers dressing.
